I am in clinek to think a prohibitory liquor law would have prevented the correspondent from fancying our town a "flat" or "that a lake was in times past" located hero. The writer of that article could have taken a walk upon 'terra firma' without putting his foot into—"several inches of watter of even after a keavy wet. Had he been a little cleaver-sighted, he might have seen scores of houses already tenanted, besides some dozen in process of erection, instead of the few he mentions. Is would, doubtless, surprise that traueling Gent. to learn that the "shop" kept by Mr. Hakos, in this "flat" not unfavorable and shaky locality, has sold to its inhabitants and the vicinity, the past year, over $20,000 worth of goods, and business is on the increase. He being able to decipher the same of S. Hakes on his return from Madison is conclusive evidence of his "being on train" (later) while going out. I was introduced to Miss Harland, when at Richmond. She is young lady, apparently of MI or 22 years of age, the daughter of a promises to mechant of that city. Her figure is rather "elightly built," and under the medium height and sithe ber boat would not be beautiful, nor her dagnerrectype pretty, she is one of the most handsome women I ever saw. Dagnerrectypes and busts do not transfer the influence of the age, or, as it is oftener called, the "expression" of the face, and Miss Harland's beauty lies in her expression. Her eyes are black and dreamy-looking, reflecting sedices and calm, conacious strongth, rather than keenness of insight and vivacity. But she is not a whining sentimentalist by any means.

"Alene." published last year, has rendered everybody impatient for her forthcoming work (from the press of Daney, N. Y.) emittled "The Hidden Path":

I was introduced to Miss Harland, when at Richnood. She is a young lady, apparently of 21 or 22 years of age, the daughter of a promisest renchant of that city. Her figure is rather "slightly built," and under the medium height and althor her boat well and the beautiful, nor her daughter petity, she is one of the most. MR. BANNISTER, THE ARRONAUT RETURNED.
